I bought this to help me plan for my section hike between Stevens Pass to Snoqualmie Pass, and it's everything I had hoped for. Campsites, water, suggested routes, and more. It's inspired me to hike the whole of the Washington section of the PCT over a few summers. Who knows perhaps I'll do the whole thing some day. Great book!!!!!!1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. it gives excellent overview information at a glanceBy DoublemomThis book is a MUST for anyone who loves to backpack in Washington State. The way it is arranged and organized, it gives excellent overview information at a glance, but also gives much more detail in the body of each chapter. Whether thinking of hiking all 500 miles of the WA PCT, or just a quick section of it for a weekend trip, this book is perfect.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Best PCT Guidebook I have seenBy Todd SummerfeltGreat guide to Washington sections of PCT. Compared to other PCT guides, this book offers more information and welcomed opinions about campsites and trail conditions. Reviewing Tami Asars' notes on sections that I have hiked, I felt her comments were spot-on. In planning to hike a couple other sections, I will absolutely use this guide for planning segments, campsites and water sources. Thank you, Tami, for all your good work put into this book.

"Tami Asars is quickly becoming one of the Northwest's cherished guidebook writers. Her latest work will serve as the definitive source for anyone considering hiking Washington's section of the Pacific Crest Trail." --Dutch Franz, Editor, Seattle Backpackers Magazine"When I was younger, my biggest dream in life was to hike the Pacific Crest Trail. I was never able to figure out how to tackle that audacious goal, and life moved on, and I set that dream aside. But now Tami Asars has come out with a unique new book about how to hike the Washington part of the trail in smaller chunks (it's called section hiking), and it's got me thinking about how to hike the PCT in more manageable pieces over a longer period of my life." --The Hiker MamaAbout the AuthorTAMI ASARS is a three generation Washingtonian who calls the North Cascades home.
