Tim O'Gorman, Dr. Steve Anders : Images of America: Fort Lee (Virginia) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Images of America: Fort Lee (Virginia):

2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. MemoriesBy Corey ReynoldsReally takes me back. Many of the pictures and information are from before my time but quite a bit of it is the old Ft Lee which I remember. The Ft Lee which is rapidly being torn down and fading into the history books...1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Good book on Fort LeeBy Francis M. ElliottFort lee, as a subject, is a bit limiting, but this work handles it well. If you have any interest of a personal or historic nature in Fort Lee, this is a photo filled effort to cover it. I was interested in things older than Fort Lee and this book provided me a single map that filled my desires. It can be many things to many people.

Fort Lee, located adjacent to the Petersburg Civil War Battlefield, is the designated Home of the United States Army Quartermaster Corps. The first Camp Lee, established as a National Army Cantonment in 1917, trained the 80th Division for service in France. In 1940, Camp Lee was reestablished, and since World War II, has trained hundreds of thousands of Quartermasters, whose numerous skills include military supply, water and petroleum operations, Army field feeding, and parachute rigging for supply by sky. Fort Lee is also the home of the Defense Commissary Agency and the Army Logistics Management College, which provides advanced schooling for Armed Forces logisticians. For over 60 years, Fort Lee has played a vital role ensuring that Americas Army is the best-equipped and most well-supported army in the world.

About the AuthorCo-authors Tim OGorman and Dr. Steve Anders have chronicled the fascinating history of Fort Lee through a compilation of over 200 vintage photographs, many of which have never been published. Tim O Gorman has been the director of the Quartermaster Museum since 1993 and has held numerous positions in state, local, and federal museums for over 20 years. Dr. Anders has been the Quartermaster Center and School Command Historian since 1984, and serves as an instructor, archivist, and member of the Command Staff at Fort Lee.
