Her first impressions are not good as she is shocked at the abject poverty and finds the heat and humidity oppressive 38 degrees, its also the start of the monsoon season. She has to cope with 6 lanes without traffic lights! Pavements full of sellers sitting by the roadside with no place to walk and in the rain they become fast flowing rivers. She manages to make some friends with the locals as she wishes to live amongst them, others do not take to westerners. It takes her a month to find where the other expats hangout. There is plenty of humour in this book, you get the feel and taste of Vietnam with all the detail that is written, it is also very revealing about how it feels to live in a communist country still poverty stricken from its legacy of war. For a first book this is well written and draws you in. Really enjoyable and I highly recommend it. 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Looking for adventureBy Alison D DI really enjoyed this story of life in Hanoi, written by an Australian woman who decides to go there on a whim. She has many interesting stories of her search for jobs, friends both Vietnamese and Ex pats from different countries. She doesn't paint a very pretty picture, more real I would say of the city itself. Did not make me want to move there, but did very much like reading about it and her escapades. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. I believe my experience of visiting Hanoi will be richer for having read this book.
