Samuel J Fell : Stars Hype: First Time Notes On The American Deep South before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Stars Hype: First Time Notes On The American Deep South:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. An Aussie in America--Rollicking!!!By Phil TrippSam Fell is one of the most prolific and learned writers on music in Australia and I've delighted in his stories for Rhythms Magazine,

Rolling Stone, Sydney Morning Herald and many more. It was amusing and fascinating to read of his exploits with wife discovering the soft underbelly of America and then barbecuing it. Full of laughs, a tinge of danger and immense shades of colours and textures, Stars Hype is a great first book for this writer.

Samuel J. Fell is an Australian journalist who for the past decade has written about music, politics, food and travel for a range of publications. In late 2015, he traveled through the American Deep South in search of music, food and whiskey. This book - his first - details this search, and his thoughts on a place as alien as it was familiar.

About the Author Samuel J. Fell is a freelance journalist and writer based in the Byron Bay area. For the past decade he has contributed hundreds of features, Op-Eds, news pieces, reviews and profiles to a range of publications, primarily on music, arts business, travel and food. Currently a Senior Contributor to Australian roots music bible Rhythms, SJF is also a critic for The Sydney Morning Herald and Rolling Stone, as well as a regular contributor to Rolling Stone, The Big Issue and The Saturday Paper. He has also contributed to The Age, The Australian Financial , Crikey, The Guardian, VICE, Tracks and Cleo, among others. Concurrently, SJF is writing a history on fifty years of Australian music press; an account of a trip to the American deep south late last year; and a fiction novel.
