Suresh Doss : StreetEats: Portland before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised StreetEats: Portland:

Major cities in North America are experiencing a veritable food-cart revolution, led by diverse fleets of mobile gourmet-food options. With carts, trucks and wagons offering traditional and not-so-traditional eating choices, the streets are full of flavour. The StreetEats series is a comprehensive guidebook to the best-known and most delicious food on the street. Each book features a profile of the city, a guide to finding the food carts (including calendar of food festivals in the city) and an A-Z listing of vendors, with personal stories, description of the menu and most popular dishes, and social media contact information. Easy to use and irresistibly enjoyable, this series book has all the lip-smacking information you need for eating from the best of the hottest, wildest and tastiest food carts around.

About the Author Suresh Doss is a writer, a photographer and the publisher of SpotlightToronto.com, an online lifestyle publication focusing on food, wine and culture. He can often be found in the kitchens and vineyards of Ontario, telling the stories of people in the food and wine industry. Founder of the Food Truck Eats festival, Suresh is a pioneer in the street food movement in Toronto. In 2011, he was awarded the VQA Promoter's Award for outstanding achievement in the Media category.
