Mark A. Ferguson : Study Abroad Europe: A Workbook of Need-to-Know Topics about the EU and the USA before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Study Abroad Europe: A Workbook of Need-to-Know Topics about the EU and the USA:

"Study Abroad Europe: A Workbook of Need-to-Know Topics about the EU and the USA" is for U.S. college students who are preparing to study abroad in Europe. Designed to help students place their study abroad experience in larger contexts by making comparisons between their European host country and the United States. Ideal for students who need to write a host country project as part of their study abroad application. More than 20 essential topics are covered, ranging from geography, people, education and political systems, to energy and the environment, health care, taxation, work and retirement. More than 50 questions serve as direction for independent research papers, class presentations or host country projects which students can complete before, during or after their study abroad experience. FREE SAMPLE CHAPTERS are available at the website for this workbook. See "More about the Author" below for the website address.

Study Abroad Europe "requires and inspires both research and reflection [and] sets students up to learn more about current issues and policies in the US and the EU in order to discuss and compare both." -- Dr. Laurel Schenkoske, University of Wisconsin Milwaukee, Unterrichtspraxis/Teaching of German Study Abroad Europe is "a very helpful aid for the individual student who is curious but needs guidance and for the faculty member who wants to create some structure around a given set of topics." -- Dr. Michael Woolf, Deputy President and Chief Academic Officer, CAPA International Education

About the Author Mark Ferguson is Program Director of the Junior Year in Munich the oldest U.S. college-sponsored study abroad program in Germany and Senior Lecturer in German at Wayne State University, Detroit, Michigan. He holds a Ph.D. in German from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. His interest in education abroad began at a young age beginning with his participation in the American Field Service program to Thailand while in high school. Throughout his college career both undergraduate and graduate he gained extensive international experience by living, studying, working and teaching in Europe (Paris, Freiburg, Mainz, Berlin, Bonn, Duisburg, Essen). Before coming to Wayne State University in 1991, he held positions as lecturer in German literature at the University of Essen in Germany and at Bates College in Maine. Since his appointment as Program Director of the Junior Year in Munich in 1995, he has helped many students build upon their study abroad experience to find jobs and start interesting, meaningful and well-paying careers.
