Nevada' is in a class by itself. Part of the reason is that Bischoff does not include the many "heated" pools that are so much a part of other guidebooks. Indeed, the emphasis here is on primitive locations and historic resorts. If you want to visit a hot springs in a truly natural setting, this is the book to get. Bischoff divides the book by geographic region (eg Northern California, Central California, Coastal, etc) and then further subdivides the book by topography: Modoc plateau (Surprise Valley), Cascades, Northern Sierra Nevada, etc. Each hot spring description includes detailed driving directions, GPS coordinates, nearby camping opportunities, and a brief write up describing the springs and noting any potential safety concerns. Visiting natural hot springs used to be a big part of my life. It is less so now, but there is still nothing like a long soak after a good hike. This book will allow you to find some great hot springs close to your location that deserve a visit. But many guides can do that. What makes this one so good are the glossy pictures and many side bars detailing local California history. You just don't find that sort of information everywhere and it makes this guide a joy to read, not simply a reference tool. Recommendation: if you like your soaks accompanied by beautiful scenery, this is the book to get.

By Rachel Powers I used this book for an off-the-grid trip in the eastern sierras. It was very handy for finding hot springs. I did find a couple of errors in the information, but overall was extremely useful. The gps location was very helpful. I could just enter it into google maps and go. It got me there every time.
